Introduction

Thank you for downloading what is the third of my Rating Reports. If you have read one of my earlier reports, you may have noticed that I've used a new title photo. Rich Cruse was kind enough to send me one of his great photos for the title. Thanks, Rich – please have a look at his other photos at <http://500px.com/cruse>.

This “summer” report looks forward to the July races that will decide the first wave of Kona PRO qualifiers. For those not familiar with the “Kona Pro Rankings”, professional athletes can score points in up to five Ironman and up to three 70.3 races during the year. The more “prestige” a race has the more points are assigned, from 6.000 points for the winner (IM Hawaii) to 4.000 (regional championships such as IM Melbourne, IM Germany and IM New York), down to only 2.000 or 1.000 points for the lower tier races. For 70.3s there are fewer points, from 3.000 (70.3 championship in Las Vegas) down to 500 points for the winner. Points are assigned pretty far down the professional field, as long as you finish a race you will score at least a few points. An athlete that wants to qualify for Kona also has to validate his slot by finishing at least one full Ironman distance race outside of Kona. The spots are assigned in two waves: At the end of July 40 male and 25 female slots are given out (including a roll-down if athletes decline their slots), at the end of August another 10 male and 5 female spots.

The information in this report will help you get a better picture of how these July races are going to influence the KPR standings. I have included the top 5 of all 2012 Kona qualifier races (starting with IM Wales and IM Wisconsin in September 2011). Using race adjustments, I can compare results from different courses, and I extracted the best 2012 performances and updated my TOP 10 ratings.

I also have a close look at the current KPR standings and discuss which athletes we can expect to qualify for Kona, who needs results from the upcoming races and who probably will not make it this year. The main contenders for Kona are already pretty obvious, so I also have a look at the winning odds for Kona 2012 – there will probably be some movement after the summer races and you can find updated versions on the website at trirating.com.

I hope that the material in this rating report is interesting for you and that it helps to make the July races even more interesting. Enjoy this report and let me know if you any other analysis ideas!

TOP 10 Performances of 2012

The best performances are totally dominated by the race with the best field this year: IM Melbourne.

Men

Other than Melbourne athletes, only winners Dirk Bockel (IM Regensburg) and David Dellow (IM Cairns) managed to sneak into the best performances.

Rank	Name	Adjusted Result	Actual Result	Race
1	Craig Alexander	08:05:37	07:57:44	IM Melbourne on 2012-03-24
2	Cameron Brown	08:08:08	08:00:12	IM Melbourne on 2012-03-24
3	Frederik Van Lierde	08:09:23	08:01:26	IM Melbourne on 2012-03-24

10	Jessica Jacobs	09:23:06	09:13:57	IM Melbourne on 2012-03-24

TOP 10 Ratings

This section shows the TOP 10 Ratings after the June IMs (last races are IM France and CdA).

Men

The men's TOP10 are dominated by Germany (4 athletes, 5 if you count German-born Dirk Bockel) and Australia (3 athletes). No US athletes in sight – the best-rated American is Jordan Rapp at #12.

Rank	Name	Nation	Rating	Last Race	# Races
1	Andreas Raelert	GER	08:13:41	IM Hawaii on 2011-10-15	8
2	Craig Alexander	AUS	08:15:05	IM Melbourne on 2012-03-24	8
3	Marino Vanhoenacker	BEL	08:19:11	IM Austria on 2011-07-03	12
4	Eneko Llanos	ESP	08:21:05	IM Melbourne on 2012-03-24	17
5	Sebastian Kienle	GER	08:23:17	IM Arizona on 2011-11-19	3
6	Timo Bracht	GER	08:23:31	IM Western Australia on 2011-12-04	15
7	Dirk Bockel	LUX	08:24:07	IM Regensburg on 2012-06-17	6
8	David Dellow	AUS	08:25:37	IM Cairns on 2012-06-02	3
9	Faris Al-Sultan	GER	08:27:18	IM Hawaii on 2011-10-15	13
10	Chris McCormack	AUS	08:27:56	IM Cairns on 2012-06-02	15

Women

European (but no German!) and Australian athletes dominate the female rankings as well, but we have also have three Americans:

Rank	Name	Nation	Rating	Last Race	# Races
1	Chrissie Wellington	GBR	08:54:06	IM Hawaii on 2011-10-15	13
2	Mirinda Carfrae	AUS	09:10:53	IM Melbourne on 2012-03-24	5
3	Julie Dibens	USA	09:17:18	IM Coeur d'Alene on 2011-06-26	2
4	Mary Beth Ellis	USA	09:18:21	IM Texas on 2012-05-19	5
5	Karin Thuerig	SWI	09:19:57	IM Hawaii on 2011-10-15	7

7	Caroline Steffen	SWI	09:22:22	IM Melbourne on 2012-03-24	11
8	Rachel Joyce	GBR	09:23:46	IM Melbourne on 2012-03-24	9
9	Amy Marsh	USA	09:27:41	IM Texas on 2012-05-19	6
10	Rebekah Keat	AUS	09:27:53	IM Melbourne on 2012-03-24	14

KPR Standings

As discussed in the introduction, WTC will assign 40 slots for men and 25 for women at the end of July based on KPR points. Last year, the July cutoff numbers were 3.115 for men and 5.035 for women. There is a similar number of races to qualify this year – most of the new races such as IM New York and IM Mont Tremblant are in August. However, it looks as if this year a higher number of points will be needed for qualifying – at this point, with 3.100 points you are ranked 45th (Ronnie Schildknecht), but that is before all the July races where a lot of points are for grabs. (Apparently, athletes are racing a bit more strategic, focusing on big point races, or racing more often in 70.3s in order to get some extra points.) The cutoff is not too easy to predict, but I'll assume that athletes with more than 3.800 points for the men will get a slot at the end of July. For the women, 5.100 points (as last year) should be enough to get a July slot.

Men

First, here are the TOP 50 men in the KPR standings at the end of June:

Some observations (the numbers indicate the position in last year's Kona race and the number of KPR points):

Enough KPR points, but not validated	Needs KPR points, not validated	Needs KPR points, already validated	New Hawaii qualifiers
Pete Jacobs 2nd, 6.425 points Was injured, but recently started and won the 70.3 in Cairns. Plans to race IM Lake Placid.	Chris Lieto 29th, 3.310 points Had a DNF in Coeur d'Alene, in a recent interview he indicated he will probably focus on the Las Vegas 70.3 championships.	Rasmus Henning 14th, 3.440 points I'm sure Rasmus is burning to get back to Kona and improve on his results. A few points from a 70.3 should be enough for him to get enough points.	David Dellow 5.000 points He certainly has the potential to crack the TOP10 in Kona, but I'm not sure if he'll be able to do better on his first try.
Andreas Raelert 3rd, 5.560 points Scheduled to start in IM Germany, has had a pretty solid build up so far	Andy Potts 17th, 2.840 points Andy was racing a lot of shorter races in the first half of the year, but now he's on the start list for IM Lake Placid. Maybe he wants to focus on Kona in the second half of the year.	Marino Vanhoenacker DNF, 3.230 points Is on the startlist for IM Germany, unless things go wrong he will make it into the July qualifiers.	Paul Matthews 4.500 points Joshua Rix 4.095 points I don't know much about these athletes.
Andi Boecherer 8th, 3.650 points Had a DNF in South Africa, wanted to start in Lanzarote but withdrew before the start. As far as I know, no summer race scheduled.	Tom Lowe 11th, 2.690 points Tom is on the start list for Austria – a fifth place there would give him another 1.200 points which should be enough for him to make it into the July qualifiers.	Sebastian Kienle -, 3.070 points I'm pretty sure Sebastian hoped to have enough points by now. He will need another solid result, and I'm not sure a 70.3 win will be enough for him.	Michael Raelert 3.830 points He's right on the edge of the "qualifying bubble" as I see it. His premier race in Kona will be anticipated, but I think he's in a similar position to David Dellow: TOP10, but probably not a candidate to win.
Faris Al-Sultan 10th, 3.589 points He's on the start list for Austria, so as long he finishes, he'll make it to Kona. It remains to be seen how fresh he's going to be in October – in 2011 he was cooked after winning IM Germany.	Matty Reed 27th, 2.215 Not sure if Kona 2011 was his one try on the Ironman distance. Couldn't find him on any IM start list.	Justin Daerr -, 3.020 points "JD" has a great result in Texas and would probably race well in the Kona heat. Not sure if he's interested to qualify and what his plans are.
Daniel Fontana 12th, 3.520 points Also on the Austria start list.		Maik Twelsiek 22nd, 2.430 On the list for Lake Placid, but even a win there will probably not be enough to qualify.

Women

Next up is a look at the current women's standing:

38.	Belinda	Harper	NZL	2880
39.	Kim	Loeffler	USA	2880
40.	Christie	Sym	AUS	2830

Some observations (as for the men, the numbers indicate the position in last year's Kona race and the number of KPR points):

Enough KPR points, but not validated	Needs KPR points, not validated	Needs KPR points, already validated	New Hawaii qualifiers
Heather Wurtele 8th, 4.620 points After her frustrating DNF in CdA, she's trying to race IM Germany.	Angela Naeth -, 3.000 points Not sure if she's interested in racing in Kona this year. Not on any IM start list.	Michelle Vesterby -, 4.440 points Has won IM Lanzarote and placed well in Melbourne, but probably needs a few more points.	Meredith Kessler 7.440 points Already a two time winner this year, she's got some time to prepare for the heat in Kona – but will probably race Canada.
Melissa Rollison -, 4.500 points She's had an injury and couldn't validate her spot in Cairns. Probably going to focus on healing for now.	Catriona Morrison 11th, 2.300 points Only has her Kona points so far. Not sure of her 2012 plans.	Virginia Berasategui 10th, 3.620 points I hope she's got a 70.3 race on her schedule, otherwise she'll probably miss Kona this year.	Gina Crawford 6.335 points Has managed to post solid results after the birth of her son Benjamin.
	Yvonne van Vlercken DNF, 1.760 points She's trying to battle it out with Carolin Steffen (and Heather Wurtele) in Germany.

Kona Predictions

Even if the Kona field is not “official” yet, based on the KPR standings and my rating system, I can put together a start list based on the results so far and my rating system. There may be some movement on the cut-off-line, but the names of the main players are already quite certain. Based on the field and their previous results, I can then calculate the odds for winning in Kona.

Men

Based on his recent results in Kona and Melbourne, Crowie is the clear favorite. Here are the current winning odds:

- Craig Alexander 34%
- Andreas Raelert 12%
- Mario Vanhoenacker 12%
- ChrisMcCormack 9%
- Pete Jacobs 7%
- Eneko Llanos 7%
- Cameron Brown 6%
- Paul Amey 2%

The graph shows how these winning odds have changed over time. Main events that lead to changes:

- IM Melbourne
This led to the “jump” in Crowie’s odds and the inclusion of Cameron Brown.
- IM Cairns
The move of the Cairns race from Challenge to Ironman gave Macca a way of validating his spot. His actual result was okay considering he raced mainly on Olympic distance training, but was a bit sub-par for him and led to lowering his statistical odds.

The summer races will probably lead to some shifts in the odds. I’m very interested how the athletes that have not yet validated their spots are going to do (Andreas, Marino, Pete).

Women

After Chrissie decided she’s not going to race an IM in 2012, Rinnie took over the frontrunner role:

- Mirinda Carfrae 31%
- Caroline Steffen 18%
- Rachel Joyce 14%
- Leanda Cave 12%
- Mary Beth Ellis 9%
- Catriona Morrison 5%

The main events that produced changes:

- Chrissie’s decision not to race
- IM Melbourne
Increasing the chances of Caroline while decreasing the chances of Rinnie.
- IM Texas
with good performances by Mary Beth Ellis and Rachel Joyce

Summer Races

The following sections have a look at the upcoming races in July (until the end of the first Kona qualification period). Here is a quick overview over the races:

Date	Race	KPR Points (1st Place)	Prize Money	Course Rating	Course Records
July 1 st	IM Austria	2.000	15.000$	17:08	7:45:58 Marino Vanhoenacker (2011) 8:43:34 Mary-Beth Ellis (2011)
July 8 th	IM Germany	4.000	25.000$	12:11	7:59:15 Timo Bracht (2009) 8:51:24 Chrissie Wellington (2008)
July 8 th	Challenge Roth	n/a	15.000€ ~19.000$	19:12	7:41:33 Andreas Raelert (2011) 8:18:13 Chrissie Wellington (2011)
July 15 th	IM Switzerland	2.000	10.000$	11:54	8:12:40 Ronnie Schildknecht (2010) 9:00:04 Karin Thürig (2010)
July 22 nd	IM Lake Placid	1.000	5.000$	-1:50	8:25:15 TJ Tollakson (2011) 9:19:03 Heather Wurtele (2011)
July 22 nd	IM UK	1.000	5.000$	1:14	8:24:34 Aaron Farlow (2011) 9:19:04 Kristin Möller (2011)

For each of these races, I will list the athletes on the start list with their current ratings and expected finishing times, and I will also show who the athletes with the best winning odds are. The rating is a weighted average of the adjusted finishing times, so if an athlete has only a few but good races he will have a pretty good rating. But his winning chances may be smaller compared to an experienced athlete with a slower rating, but with a small number of great races and a few slower ones.

One constant frustration for me is the quality of the start lists:

- Often, they are very difficult to find.
- When they exist, they are not quite up-to-date. Athletes that are injured and have decided not to race are not taken off the list.
- With the Ironman Pro Membership, athletes can race as many IMs as they like. To be on the safe side, some athletes register for every IM race, even if they are just a week or two apart.
- Some athletes decide to enter a race just a few days before the start.

I'm sure that I'm not the only one who sees this as a problem. I think race directors and/or WTC should put some effort into providing up-to-date start lists and minimize the changes after a certain cut-off point (say two weeks before a race). Also, there should be a standard way of finding a list of Pros registered for a certain race.

After the July races, there are a few more races in August that still allow people to score some more points in order to qualify for Kona 2012:

Date	Race	KPR Points (1st Place)	Prize Money	Course Rating	Course Records
Aug 11 th	IM New York	4.000	25.000$		New IM Race
Aug 18 th	IM Sweden	2.000	8.000$		New IM Race
Aug 19 th	IM Mont Tremblant	1.000	5.000$		New IM Race
Aug 26 th	IM Louisville	1.000	5.000$	2:57	8:25:27 Victor Zyemtsev (2009) 9:20:21 Nina Kraft (2009)
Aug 26 th	IM Canada	1.000	5.000$	3:14	8:25:13 Jordan Rapp (2011) 9:03:13 Mary-Beth Ellis (2011)

I will post some more information about these races on trirating.com once there is some information about the participating athletes.

Challenge Roth

It is a bit tricky to build a Pro start list for Challenge Roth as they do not have a "PRO" category but lump everyone together according to age. Nonetheless, I have tried to extract the Pros from the full start list
